By-and-By — Somowhere, dawn the stream of Time on which we are florting, is a beautiful island, called the By-and-by. It may be last before as beyond the next turn of the river, or we may not find it until the stream disembegues itself into the ocean of eternity. But we all lock for it, from infancy to old age, and dream that all will be benished, when we arrive at the beantiful island—By-and-by.

A land of promise is that By and-by. In it we all have rich possessions, the anticipated enversant of which alone renders life tolerable. The past has preven a weary way; the present is full of theme and beset with dangers, but in the guiden By-and by there is a recompense for all. There the lighten beart shall be healed, and the weary spirit find a rest. Who would sell his betthinght in this land?
